Outcome Based Education The States

Outcome-based education or outcomes-based education (OBE), also known as standards-based education, is an educational theory that bases each part of an educational system around goals (outcomes). By the end of the educational experience, each student should have achieved the goal. There is no single specified style of teaching or assessment in OBE; instead, classes, opportunities, and assessments should all help students achieve the specified outcomes.

Even more basic is the distinction between OBE and the setting of high school graduation outcomes. Just because a state requires its high school graduates to achieve specific outcomes does not mean that schools necessarily engage in outcome-based education to prepare students for graduation assessments. And finally, a movement that purports to develop "complex thinkers," "responsible citizens," and "community contributors" faces complex measurement challenges, both conceptual and ...
